Governance and Financial Support

“We commit to strengthening ALE at the local level and recognise that ALE needs own institutions such as community learning centres (CLCs). CLC systems need proper governance structures across sectors and spheres and public financial support that should be adequate, predictable and sustainable.”
Multifunctional and Transformative

“Community learning centres (CLCs) are multifunctional and innovative institutions supporting inclusive and transformative learning. They cater for education and training, community information, counselling and act as social and cultural meeting places.”
“Community learning centres (CLCs) provide a broad variety of learning opportunities allowing for flexible responses to changing societal needs and resilience building in case of crisis. They range from basic education, literacy and languages to income generating activities, vocational training, life skills and citizenship education.”
“Community learning centres (CLCs) are local hubs to provide education and lifelong learning for all, leaving no-one behind. They support the sustainable development goals, with positive impacts on other sectors such as health and well-being, conflict prevention and promotion of peace as well as gender equality and climate justice.”
